Folium Vineyard is an eight-hectare site located in the Brancott Valley in Marlborough. Due to the wide temperature range the area experiences throughout the day during the growing season, its fruit retains higher natural acidity while also accumulating aromatics and flavour components. Marlborough's soil was originally created by the ancient glacial action and river systems. The low vigour, clay-based soil in Brancott Valley is able to retain sufficient moisture during the dry summer months to balance the growth of the vines. Folium believes that winemaking starts in the vineyard. Owner, Takaki Okada, originally from Japan, takes extremely detailed care of the fruit, starting with pruning in the winter, followed by canopy management and leaf plucking during the summer through to hand harvesting, at optimum ripeness, in the autumn. Different management is utilised for different clones and vine ages, matching their individual needs. Takaki continues to use time honoured winemaking techniques to produce quality wines that express the unique nature of Folium Vineyard.
